

This person is reading poetry for

April 17, 2000, 9 am to 9 pm - Coast to Coast

Today, across Canada and parts of the US poets are standing up and reading their poetry aloud in celebration of Poetry Month. People are reading in Peterborough, Nanaimo, London, Calgary, Nanoose Bay, Burnaby, Toronto, Port Colborne, Winnipeg, Hamburg, NY, Halifax, Seattle, Parry Sound, Ennismore, Whitby, Keene, Lund, Coldwater, Bowen Island and many places in between.

As soon as this poet is finished, another poet will start reading somewhere else - every fifteen minutes.

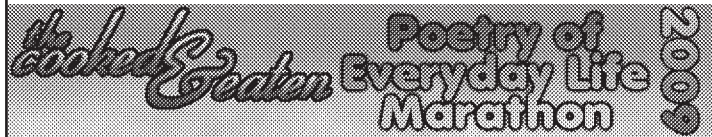

While you are here, listening to this poet, and as you go about the rest of your day, take a moment to notice the poetry all around you. The poetry of everyday life. Today, poetry is being brought to life across the country. Tomorrow? It will still be there, perhaps more silent, but still there. Take time to look for it, when you can.

Poets are presenting themselves at bus stops, shopping malls, in offices and right here in front of you.

For now, enjoy the Cooked and Eaten Poetry of Everyday Life Marathon.

www.cookedandateaten.com

This person is reading poetry for

April 17, 2000, 9 am to 9 pm - Coast to Coast

Today, across Canada and parts of the US poets are standing up and reading their poetry aloud in celebration of Poetry Month. People are reading in Peterborough, Nanaimo, London, Calgary, Nanoose Bay, Burnaby, Toronto, Port Colborne, Winnipeg, Hamburg, NY, Halifax, Seattle, Parry Sound, Ennismore, Whitby, Keene, Lund, Coldwater, Bowen Island and many places in between.

As soon as this poet is finished, another poet will start reading somewhere else - every fifteen minutes.

While you are here, listening to this poet, and as you go about the rest of your day, take a moment to notice the poetry all around you. The poetry of everyday life. Today, poetry is being brought to life across the country. Tomorrow? It will still be there, perhaps more silent, but still there. Take time to look for it, when you can.

Poets are presenting themselves at bus stops, shopping malls, in offices and right here in front of you.

For now, enjoy the Cooked and Eaten Poetry of Everyday Life Marathon.

www.cookedandateaten.com

This person is reading poetry for

April 17, 2000, 9 am to 9 pm - Coast to Coast

Today, across Canada and parts of the US poets are standing up and reading their poetry aloud in celebration of Poetry Month. People are reading in Peterborough, Nanaimo, London, Calgary, Nanoose Bay, Burnaby, Toronto, Port Colborne, Winnipeg, Hamburg, NY, Halifax, Seattle, Parry Sound, Ennismore, Whitby, Keene, Lund, Coldwater, Bowen Island and many places in between.

As soon as this poet is finished, another poet will start reading somewhere else - every fifteen minutes.

While you are here, listening to this poet, and as you go about the rest of your day, take a moment to notice the poetry all around you. The poetry of everyday life. Today, poetry is being brought to life across the country. Tomorrow? It will still be there, perhaps more silent, but still there. Take time to look for it, when you can.

Poets are presenting themselves at bus stops, shopping malls, in offices and right here in front of you.

For now, enjoy the Cooked and Eaten Poetry of Everyday Life Marathon.

www.cookedandateaten.com

This person is reading poetry for

April 17, 2000, 9 am to 9 pm - Coast to Coast

Today, across Canada and parts of the US poets are standing up and reading their poetry aloud in celebration of Poetry Month. People are reading in Peterborough, Nanaimo, London, Calgary, Nanoose Bay, Burnaby, Toronto, Port Colborne, Winnipeg, Hamburg, NY, Halifax, Seattle, Parry Sound, Ennismore, Whitby, Keene, Lund, Coldwater, Bowen Island and many places in between.

As soon as this poet is finished, another poet will start reading somewhere else - every fifteen minutes.

While you are here, listening to this poet, and as you go about the rest of your day, take a moment to notice the poetry all around you. The poetry of everyday life. Today, poetry is being brought to life across the country. Tomorrow? It will still be there, perhaps more silent, but still there. Take time to look for it, when you can.

Poets are presenting themselves at bus stops, shopping malls, in offices and right here in front of you.

For now, enjoy the Cooked and Eaten Poetry of Everyday Life Marathon.

www.cookedandateaten.com

